GRADY-WHITE CANYON 266

Grady-White's all-new Canyon 266 strikes a balance between rugged angling DNA and sleek, family-friendly ergonomics and offers a long list of features while still maximizing deck space for comfort and utility. Helm seating features a deluxe leaning post with backrest, split flip-up bolster, fold-down armrests, tackle trays, lockable storage, four-rod rocket launcher and a 31-gallon livewell. The T-top features an integrated laminated glass windshield, storage net, LED spreader lights, four rod holders, radar flat, and outrigger plates.

Inside the lockable stand-up console there's indirect lighting, window, sink, and marine head with electric flush. Shaped by real-world use, the Canyon 266 offers adaptable aft facing seating which transitions easily from an entertainment center to a battle-ready fishing platform. Alongside these creature comforts is a cockpit side door with removable ladder engineered for effortless boarding, dockside handling, and landing large fish. Forward of the console, a lounge with contoured cushion and backrest has a 217-quart cooler below while cushioned bow seating to port and starboard have infinitely adjustable electric backrests and 60-quart insulated storage below. Other standard features include forward and cockpit coaming bolsters, raw-water washdown, thru-hull anchor chute with windlass, 15.5-gallon transom livewell, transom door, foldaway aft bench seat and a 167-quart transom fish box with overboard drain. Noteworthy options include a forward casting platform insert with cushion and 18-foot crank T-top mounted stainless steel outriggers mounts with carbon fiber outriggers.
