Grady-White Canyon 266

You can have it all.

Grady-White has been building high-quality fishing and family-oriented boats since 1959. For 2027, Grady-White has released the all-new Canyon 266. Built on the company's legendary hand-laid SeaV² hull, the new model features a freshly designed hull and deck and carries a huge list of standard features. With every new design, Grady-White leans heavily into customer wish lists and requests, and the new Canyon 266 is no exception.

Bridging the gap between luxury dayboat and serious offshore fishing machine, the Canyon 266 does not sacrifice comfort and convenience for utility and ability. Plush seating and a luxurious entertainment center can be easily converted into a fishing-focused environment.

A cockpit side door with boarding ladder, transom door and convenient swim platform extensions make it easy to board the boat from the dock or water. At the bow, the Canyon 266 features wraparound forward seating with adjustable electric backrests and a contoured lounge. A fully enclosed stand-up head with a sink is accessible beneath the console.

The new Canyon 266 also provides a solid platform for those looking to chase big fish. Twin Yamaha 200 engines are standard, as are the T-top, glass windshield, trim tabs and anchor windlass. Forward and aft livewells, huge fishboxes, tackle trays, lockable storage and plenty of rod holders are standard, while mounting pads already exist for options like outriggers and radar.

"Every detail of the Canyon 266 is crafted to support how you use your boat today, and where you want to go next," says Todd Leggett, Grady-White director of sales and customer relations. "This boat delivers an unmatched experience on the water and is a masterclass in versatility, proving you never have to settle for less when looking for a boat that truly does it all." ★
