

The first all-new Grady-White model to emerge following the company's landmark ownership announcement is the Canyon 266, a versatile center console that balances serious offshore capability with the comforts today's families expect from the boatbuilder. Measuring 27 feet, 7 inches overall with a 9-foot beam, the 266 rides on Grady-White's proven SeaV² hull and is powered by up to 600

hp from twin Yamaha outboards. A 150-gallon fuel tank gives the boat the range for offshore runs, while twin livewells are complemented by insulated fish boxes, abundant rod storage throughout and a cockpit-side dive and boarding door. When it's time to re-lax, electrically adjustable bow backrests, a forward console lounge with cooler beneath, an electrically extending aft-facing seat, an enclosed head compartment and integrated swim platforms help transform the 266 into a capable family dayboat. By combining premium fishing features with thoughtful social spaces, the Canyon 266 is designed to appeal to owners who want one boat that can comfortably handle everything from offshore fishing trips to afternoons at the sandbar.

The Grady-White Canyon 266 is big and powerful enough to fish offshore, yet is sized right for trailering and easy handling.
