Grady-White 321 Coastal Explorer

Grady-White goes hyper-hybrid with the 321 Coastal Explorer.

If you want the biggest, most luxurious hybrid bay boat around, you'll want to take a look at the Grady-White 321 Coastal Explorer. It's a stretch to say this is a shoal water boat (draft is 1'10") but it will certainly prove ideal for many bay anglers, with gobs of casting territory and elevated casting decks fore and aft. It will serve well offshore, too, with an aft-facing mezzanine seat behind the leaning post, gobs of integrated tackle stowage, and options for outriggers and a bow-mount trolling motor setup. As for the luxury aspect, check out perks like a double-wide console lounge, electric-actuated backrests, and swing-down hullsides that turn into huge swim platforms. Added bonus: this is the only boat in its class to offer triple-wide helm seating.
